● Monika Grzymala: Ruptures London

There is a fearful energy to Monika Grzymala's drawing installations: layer upon layer of black lines scrawling up the gallery walls as if she's suffering a manic bout of brain fever. They have a similar intensity to Henri Michaux's shaky scribbles made while high on mescaline. Using strips of sticky tape, Grzymala builds up a complex web of lines determined by the architectural space around her. Her new installation will be a visual crescendo inspired by the chaos of the London skyline. π
